"THEY'LL PINCH ME AGAIN," SAYS JOHN LAUGHMAN

John Laughman predicted today that he would soon be arrested for the 20th time. Laughman—free thinker—was in Judge Wells' court today—again. It was his 19th visit in court on charge of violating the sanctity of the law by his utterances at Michigan av. and 112th. His case was continued till Sept. 7.

"The police would not arrest me so often if I would lay off talking about religion," said Laughman, as he came out of the courtroom, "but I'm not going to stop talking religion."
